AMICUS

Notes from the Dean

In this issue of Amicus I feel compelled to address some of the Law School's more pressing financial needs. After about sixteen months as Dean I am more convinced than ever that the Law School has an excellent faculty, an outstanding student body and a superb physical facility; but that the Law School will never reach its full potential until it somehow acquires from both public and private sources the financial support which a truly first-rate law school needs. Possibly the Law School's more serious long-range problem is the steadily deteriorating condition of its Law Library collection. This situation poses a serious threat to our ability to maintain the quality of our faculty and to attract new top-notch faculty members. Indeed, I think it is fair to state that most of our faculty members are more concerned about the lack of library support than they are about their own clearly non-competitive salaries.

The University of Colorado is one of the fifty or so members of the American Association of Universities which claims to include the top universities in the country. There are twenty state-supported (or more accurately, state-assisted) universities with law schools in that group, and I assure you that this is the group with which we generally compete for faculty. Last year, the most recent year for which we have comparative data, CU's law school ranked last in that group in terms of library support. Indeed, that group's median library budget (both personnel and collection acquisition) was $560,000 and ours was $263,000.

Our outstanding Law Librarian Oscar Miller and I have about concluded that the only solution to our library problems lies in the Law School's raising substantial endowment support, and that our ultimate need in that regard is about $3 million. Recently our great and loyal friend Ira Rothgerber pledged $100,000 towards this effort, payable when we raise an additional $900,000, and our immediate goal therefore is to raise that $900,000. I have already individually contacted a number of our alumni who might be willing and able to give the Law School substantial help in realizing its Law Library endowment objectives, and I urge all of our alumni to give this matter your thoughtful consideration.

The Law School's financial problems, of course, do not end with its library. For example, in 1973 the Law School received $167,000 in need-based student financial aid from the State. Last year we received $70,000 and this year only $59,000, so it is apparent that even without considering inflation the Law School's student financial aid situation also has badly deteriorated.

Needs for such things as additional faculty dictating equipment and research assistance also regularly exceed the funds which the State provides the Law School for those purposes, and of course we somehow have to supplement our library acquisition budget until such time as we do raise a library endowment.

These more near-term but nevertheless continuing problems can only be solved by substantially increasing the Law School's level of annual giving. I urge all alumni and friends of the law School to reassess your level of participation in our annual giving program. If you are not a member of the Dean's Club, I urge you to join; if you are already a member, I urge you to consider increasing your commitment. After all, an annual commitment of $200 or $250 now is about the same in terms of purchasing power as was $100 when many Dean's Club members first joined.

Let me close by again emphasizing that notwithstanding our financial problems, your Law School has a faculty, a student body and a facility of which you should all be very proud. It is just that I hope you join me in wanting to make it all even better.

Rubright Wins Knous Award

Royal C. Rubright, Class of 1932, is the winner of the 1980 University of Colorado School of Law William Lee Knous Award. The award was conferred during the law alumni breakfast at the Broadmoor Hotel on Saturday, October 11.

Rubright was born in Denver, Colorado, and attended the University of Colorado, from which he received B.A., LL.B. and LL.M. degrees. He has been with the Denver law firm of Fairfield and Woods since 1940. In the award citation, Rubright was recognized as a leading figure in both the Denver and Colorado Bar Associations. He served as President of the Denver Bar in 1957-58, has been a recipient of the Denver Bar's Annual Award of Merit, and is a member of the Colorado Bar Association Real Estate Section and served as Chairman of that Section.

Mr. Rubright has been an instructor at the University of Denver and a special lecturer at the University of Colorado. He is a member of the Real Property, Probate, and Trust Section of the American Bar Association and a Fellow of the American College of Probate Counsel. He has also been a speaker at numerous legal institutes of both the Denver and Colorado Bar Associations on real property law.

Royal C. Rubright has published a number of articles in legal periodicals, including the University of Denver Law Journal and the Rocky Mountain Law Review, and for several years authored or co-authored the Annual Survey of Colorado Law. He was a contributing author in the Colorado Practice Manual, edited by Edward C. King. He has been listed in Who's Who in American Law and Who's Who in America.

Rubright has been active in the examination of real estate titles and related work since 1935. In addition to the many recognized activities in which he has participated and the many clients he has represented in his field of real estate law over the years, he has always been willing to lend an attentive ear and a helping hand to a myriad of fellow attorneys who have sought his counsel. It is this spirit of willingness to participate and cooperate that has best characterized his practice.

The Knous Award is given annually by the Law Alumni Board for outstanding achievement by an alumnus in his or her chosen field, and it is named in honor of one of the most distinguished alumni of the University's School of Law, the late chief justice of the U.S. District Court and former Colorado governor.

Rothgerber Competition

The final round argument in the Rothgerber Moot Court Competition was held at 3:00 p.m. in the Lindsley Memorial Courtroom on Friday, October 24, 1980. Special guests in attendance included Chancellor J. Russell Nelson of the Boulder Campus, and Ira C. Rothgerber, Jr. Serving as judges for the competition were Justice Luis D. Rovira, Supreme Court of Colorado, Judge James K. Logan, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, and Commissioner Barbara Singer Thomas, Securities and Exchange Commission. Representing the Petitioners were Kimberley A. Bieter, Laura C. Harper and Vija Kemanis. Representing the Respondents were Robert W. Becker, Andrew J. Gamble and Timothy R. Schupp.

The case included issues involving the status of a discretionary trading account under the federal securities laws and whether a private right of action might be implied for violations of the Commodity Exchange Act. After consideration of the briefs and oral arguments, the court ruled in favor of the respondents. Participants and audience were invited to attend a wine and cheese reception following the conclusion of the competition.

The Rothgerber Moot Court Competition was endowed in 1951 by Ira C. Rothgerber, Jr., to commemorate the 50th anniversary of his father's graduation from the University of Colorado School of Law.

New Assistant Dean

Ruth Casarez was appointed Assistant Dean of the Law School in February 1980. A graduate of the University of Texas at Austin and the University of Denver College of Law, she was employed as a staff attorney with the legal Aid Society of Denver during 1973-74. From 1974 to 1978, she was a Clinical Instructor at the University of Denver College of Law, and taught courses in Trial Advocacy, Creditor-Debtor, Legal Representation of the Poor, and a seminar on Equal Employment Opportunity. In 1978 she was appointed by the Colorado Supreme Court to the Board of Mandatory Continuing Legal Education and served in that position until 1980.

Development Director

Barbara S. (Bobbi) Allar was recently appointed as the first full-time Director of Development for the University of Colorado Law School. She holds a bachelor's degree from New York University and a master's degree from Columbia University. Prior to her appointment at the Law School, she was a fund-raising intern with the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver, and also has served as Director of Development for Classic Chorale, Inc., of Denver.

Law School Sponsors CLE Course

The University of Colorado School of Law sponsored a continuing legal education short course entitled "Federal Lands, Laws and Policies and the Development of Natural Resources". The five-day conference was held July 28 through August 1 at the Fleming Law Building in Boulder. Participants included 70 attorneys, non-attorneys and law students, representing private firms, public interest groups, government agencies, and the mining and energy industries. Instructors were nationally recognized legal scholars and practitioners in natural resources law.

The course began with an overview of the development of federal policies for management of the public lands and the natural resources contained therein, and then each of the significant natural resources statutes (the National Environmental Policy Act, the Clean Air and Water Acts, the Resources Conservation and Recovery Act, the Federal Land Policy Management Act, etc.) was dealt with in more detail. The next section of the course examined hard rock mining on the public lands, and was highlighted by a guided tour of the Colorado School of Mines' experimental mine in Idaho Springs. The development of legislation and policies regarding fuel minerals including coal and oil shale was surveyed, culminating in a panel discussion on the effects of environmental protection laws and government regulation on federally controlled coal in the West.

The conference was highlighted by a presentation Friday morning by Clyde O. Martz, Solicitor of the U.S. Department of the Interior, who outlined the latest developments in legislation and executive policy on energy mineral development. Mr. Martz's comments were followed by a group discussion raising questions as to the adequacy of federal policy on energy and resource development.

The conference was the first in a planned series of annual CLE courses. Information on this program or on plans for the 1981 course may be obtained by contacting Professor David Getches, Conference Chairman, at the Law School.

Student Wins First Prize

Third year law student Leonard S. Katz won first prize in the 1980 writing contest sponsored by the Rocky Mountain Chapter of the Industrial Relations Research Association. The topic of his paper was "Discipline and Discharge for Off-Duty, Off-Company Premises Misconduct." The paper presents a critical analysis of the factors considered by arbitrators in the disposition of certain off-duty, off-company premises employee misconduct cases. The types of misconduct include criminal arrest and conviction, political activities, unbecoming and immoral conduct and disloyalty.

The $200 award was presented to Katz at the meeting of the Rocky Mountain Chapter of the Industrial Relations Research Association on March 27, 1980 at the Denver Hilton Hotel.

Apocrypha

A tenth year reunion of the Law School Class of 1969 was held in Denver on July 27, 1979. Approximately 70 persons attended, including new and old spouses. The Law School was represented by Professors Oscar Miller and Skip Chase. Hosts for the reunion were Ray Carey, Duncan Cameron, and Dave Brougham. Since all kegs of beer purchased for the event were consumed, it appears that the reunion was relatively successful.

Notable attendees from a geographic standpoint included Randy Phelps, Dennis Wanifuchi, and Lary Heller from Los Angeles, Pat Cashill from Reno, and Susan and Hugh Calkins from Portland, Maine. Political considerations undoubtedly prevented congressional candidate Hank Brown from attending, but probably prompted the attendance of councilman Pete Susemihl from Colorado Springs, who also conveyed regrets from El Paso County Judge Dave Parrish. With these exceptions, the remaining attendees appeared to be just plain lawyers, with the possible exception of Russ DeSalvo, who is rumored to have once run for district attorney in Pueblo.

Facts discovered during the reunion and interesting only to members of the Class of '69 include the pleasant surprise that Bob Wherry is married to a very pretty lady, and the not-so-surprising fact that Bruce Pringle's hair has been transferred from the top of his head to his lip. Additionally, anyone having patent law problems on the West Coast should contact John Cooper in San Francisco, and those interested in real maple syrup should contact Bob Roesler in Shelburne, Vermont. Finally, for those interested in the locations of all members of the Class of '69, except Tony Lanza, it should be noted that the Law School has an updated, computerized list of this information.

Admissions

This year the Admissions Committee experimented with a new recruitment system. Alumni located in geographical areas near especially qualified applicants who are accepted for admission were contacted and asked to be available to speak with admittees about the Law School. We were pleased to see how many alumni gladly volunteered to help. We encourage all alumni to assist, not only in this way, but also by always referring top qualified applicants to C.U. If you know a particularly well-qualified applicant, or would be available to help recruit admittees in your area, please contact us.

Applications to the Law School increased 17% over last year. Some 1,300 applications were received, with slightly more than 500 applicants offered admission to assure filling the 157 spaces available. Of the 157 students who enrolled, 67% were Colorado residents. The high percentage of resident students reflects the Law School's continued interest in serving the people of the state. Women represent 42% of the entering class with 66 enrolled. This is an increase from the comparable figure of 32% and 50 enrollees in 1979. The quality of the entering class continues to be very high, with an average of 639 on the Law School Admission Test and an average grade-point score of 3.40.

CLE Faculty Workshop Series

The University of Colorado School of Law presented a series of five continuing education programs this fall. The Saturday morning sessions conducted by faculty members were held to coincide with home football games. They were held at the Fleming Law Building from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, and were scheduled as follows:

- Sept. 27: Securities Law. Professor Ted. J. Fiffis
Oct. 4: Estate Planning, Professor Emeritus William J. Bowe
Oct. 11: Water Law. Professor James N. Corbridge, Jr.

Oct. 25: Real Estate Planning. Professor Norton L. Steuben

Nov. 15: Labor Law. Professor William E. Rentfro and Raymond L. Hogler

Each workshop was approved for three units of Continuing Legal Education credit. The registration fee was $35 per session.

King Honored

On October 17, 1979, the Dean of the Faculty of International Affairs of Columbia University confirmed the designation of Harold Taft King of Denver as a Cordier Fellow. The Fellowship was named after the deceased President of Columbia University. The citation stated: "Mr. King, as a private citizen of this country, has distinguished himself on foreign affairs missions under appointment from the President of the United States and the U.S. Department of State. He was Chairman of the United States delegation to UNESCO in Paris where he commenced discussions on lowering this government's percentage of participation in the expenses of UNESCO so that nations such as West Germany and Japan would provide a larger portion. Mr. King has been Public Counselor at the U.S. Embassy in London and in Dublin. He received a letter of special commendation from the Ambassador to Ireland, Mr. John Moore, and from U.S. Under-Secretary Ingersoll for his services in the British Isles.

His long experience in the financial field involving homes and other major construction led to his appointment as a member of a ten-man businessmen's delegation to Cairo, Egypt, and a similar delegation to Israel which was postponed due to the Sadat-Begin talks. He is presently engaged in the legal profession in Denver where he is a member of the Board of Directors of two of the largest financial institutions in the region, each over a billion dollars in size; namely, the Capitol Life Insurance Company and Columbia Savings and Loan Association.

He has been made a member of the American Foreign Service Association for the United States Department of State and of the Public Members Association of that Department, and is a member of the Advisory Board for the Center for the Study of the Presidency . . ."

Mr. King is a graduate of the University of Colorado Law School, Class of 1930. He was Class President of the over-all student body of the University in his senior year. He has been listed in Who's Who in America for many years. His law practice has involved everything from murder cases to high corporate events, and he was a co-builder of the Petroleum Building in Denver which was the first modern high-rise building erected in the 50's by local people.

Our congratulations to Harold Taft King for his distinguished career and for the honor of having been designated a Cordier Fellow.

Associate Dean Appointed

William T. Pizzi was appointed Associate Dean of the Law School as of July 19, 1980. A native of New Jersey, he holds a bachelor's degree from Holy Cross College, a master's degree from the University of Massachusetts and a law degree from Harvard Law School. From 1972 to 1975 he was assistant U.S. attorney for the District of New Jersey, and in 1974 he received a special achievement award from the U.S. Department of Justice. He joined the University of Colorado Law School faculty in 1975, and has been active on a number of University committees including privilege and tenure and library committees.

Faculty On Leave

Albert W. Alschuler is on leave during the fall semester, but remains in Boulder working in his Law School office. He is the Project Director for a $69,000 grant from the National Institute of Justice to the University to further his long-term study of plea bargaining in the U.S.

Professor Alschuler has completed a manuscript entitled "The Changing Plea Bargaining Debate", and will present a portion of this paper at the Austin W. Scott, Jr., Lecture at the Law School on November 20, 1980.

Professor Alschuler appeared as the judge in the Law School's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial By Jury" at the State Bar Convention on October 10, 1980, and he managed to remain on pitch almost all of the time.

Homer H. Clark, Jr., is on leave during the 1980-81 academic year. He is teaching as a Visiting Professor at the University of California at Davis Law School. In August, 1980, the West Publishing Company published his 3rd edition of "Cases and Problems on Domestic Relations", which is one of the most widely used law school instructional casebooks in the country.

Don W. Sears is on leave during the fall semester. He is spending the semester in Ireland, where he is associated with University College in Dublin, which is part of the National University of Ireland. He is giving a series of lectures at the University College Law School, and is also conducting legal research. A recent letter indicates that he and his wife Eve are also enjoying a series of journeys to various portions of Ireland.

Robert F. Nagel is on leave during the 1980-81 academic year. He is serving as Visiting Professor of Law at Cornell University Law School in Ithaca, New York.

Personalities

For his "contribution to the legal profession and the building of a strong system of justice", Garrett Fonda of Pueblo has received the Colorado Bar Association's award of merit, the bar's highest honor. Fonda has practiced in Pueblo since 1949 after receiving his law degree from the University of Colorado and has been active in local and state bar associations.

J. David Pennell, Bozeman, Montana attorney, a 1962 graduate of the University of Colorado Law School, will present a paper at an international timeshare conference in Mexico City on November 24, 1980. He will be speaking on the legal requirements imposed on corporations offering foreign timeshare properties in the U.S. The conference is being presented by Ecoplan, S.A., an economic consulting firm in Mexico and South America.

Paul Strong, (A&S '27, LLB '29) was recently recognized for having practiced law for over 50 years. Strong lives and practices law in Houston, Texas.

Rockwell M. Groves has been appointed Vice-President for Industrial Relations of SPS Technologies, Jenkintown, Pa. A member of the Ohio and Colorado bars, he received his law degree from the University of Colorado in 1958. He formerly was director of employee relations for the Des Moines Register and Tribune, and earlier was superintendent of labor relations for the Timken Roller Bearing Co., Canton, Ohio, and assistant director of industrial relations for Eltra Corp. in Toledo. Groves, his wife and four children are residing in Maple Glen, Pa.

New Faculty

Associate Professor Amy Hess graduated from the University of Virginia Law School in 1971. She has practiced law with Kelley, Drye and Warren in New York City, and Virginia. She has taught Wills and Trusts and Federal Estate Gift Tax as a part-time instructor at the University of Tennessee Law School during the 1979-80 academic year.

Associate Professor Mark Loewenstein graduated from the University of Illinois Law School in 1974. From 1974 to 1979 he was associated with the firm of Altheimer and Gray in Chicago, Illinois, specializing in securities work. During the 1979-80 academic year Mark was a visiting professor at this school, teaching Accounting for Lawyers, Corporations, Professional Responsibility, and Securities Regulation.

Visiting Faculty

Chris Brauchli graduated from the University of Colorado School of Law in 1961. Chris is a member of the Boulder firm of Martin, Brauchli and Jevons. He has been very active in bar activities and is presently a member of the Ethics Committee, the Supreme Court Nominating Commission, and the Supreme Court Grievance Committee. He will be teaching Professional Responsibility.

Jim Bunch graduated from Northwestern Law School in 1967. He practices in the securities area in Denver at Davis, Graham and Stubbs. Jim has done considerable work for the Colorado Bar Association's Ethics Committee and served as chairperson in 1978-79. He will be teaching Professional Responsibility.

John Carlson graduated from Yale Law School in 1967. He practices in the water resources area at Holland and Hart. John will be teaching Water Resources this fall.

Ben Chidlaw graduated from the University of Colorado School of Law 1955. Until 1978, Ben was a partner in the Denver firm of Holland and Hart. During the 1979-80 academic year Ben taught Wills and Trusts, Estate and Gift Tax, Oil and Gas, and Real Estate Planning at this school.

Richard Collins graduated from Harvard Law School in 1966. He is with the Native American Rights Fund in Boulder. Rick has taught Trial Advocacy, Property, and Wills and Trusts at this school, the latter two courses as a visiting instructor in the spring semester of 1980.

Peter Tillers received the J.D. degree from Harvard Law School in 1969, and the LL.M. degree there in 1972. He has held teaching positions at Rutgers (Camden) Law School (1977-78), Boston College Law School (1975-76), the University of Puget Sound Law School (1972-75), and the University of Wisconsin Law School (1970-71). Since 1978 he has been associated with the San Antonio firm of Soules and McCamish in the litigation department. He is revising Volume I of Wigmore on Evidence. Peter will be teaching Criminal Law this fall.

Gilda Tuoni received the J.D. degree from Boston College Law School in 1976 and anticipates the LL.M. degree from Harvard Law School in 1980. She clerked for the Honorable Francis J. Quirico of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in 1977-78, and has been associated with the Boston firm of Nutter, McClennen and Fish in civil litigation since 1975. Jim will be teaching Constitutional Law.

Jim Winchester received the J.D. degree from George Washington University Law Center in 1971. Following graduation, he clerked for Federal District Judge William Bryant of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. From 1972 to 1975 he was a trial attorney with the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. He has been Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Colorado since 1975. Jim will be teaching Torts and Employment Discrimination in the fall.

Women and the Law

The 12th National Conference on Women and the Law, an annual gathering of women whose work and interests address the relationship between women and the legal system, will be held in Boston from April 3-5, 1981. The theme of the conference, "Women and Justice — Blind No More", will focus on the concerns of poor and minority women.

More Personalities

John W. Henderson, class of 1916, is the only member of his law class who is still actively practicing law. He is also on the Board of Directors of the First National Bank in Greeley, where he resides.

Bert M. Goldwater, class of 1939, is serving as a U.S. Bankruptcy Judge for the District of Nevada.

Donald F. Clifford, Jr., class of 1963, has been appointed associate dean for academic affairs at the School of Law at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. He will be responsible for student academic counseling and administration of the curriculum. Clifford is a member of the Colorado and North Carolina Bar Associations.

Paul A. Markson, Jr., class of 1968, chief deputy district attorney in Denver, was appointed to fill a vacancy as district judge in Denver. He has been with the district attorney's office since 1973.

Clarold F. Morgan, class of 1968, of Colorado Springs, is Vice-President of the Holly Sugar Company, and is a member of the American Bar Association and the Colorado Bar Association. He was listed in Who's Who in Finance and Industry 1979-80.

Steven R. Lake, class of 1973, was a speaker at a seminar in Montreal on July 19-20, 1980. His topic concerned the use of demonstrative evidence in domestic relations trials. The seminar was organized by attorney Melvin Belli for the Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

Barry W. Mancz, class of 1977, has earned the status of Diplomate of the Court Practice Institute. He attended the week-long seminar in Chicago in August 1980, along with forty other lawyers from throughout the country. The intensive program was designed to improve trial skills of attorneys of all experience levels.

Lambertson Appointed

Ronald E. Lambertson, class of 1970, has been selected as Associate Director — Federal Assistance of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. As Associate Director, Lambertson will be responsible for administering the complex Endangered Species Act and its provisions on listing, reclassification, designation of critical habitat, recovery, and protection of imperiled species, and also for consulting with other federal agencies on projects that could affect protected species. He will also direct U.S. implementation of a 54 nation treaty, the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, and will oversee the issuance of permits for activities with species listed both the Act and the Convention. In addition, he will be responsible for dispensing some $110 million a year to the states and territories for fish and wildlife restoration and enhancement projects.

Lambertson joined the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in 1970 and rose to the rank of Assistant Solicitor in 1974, becoming one of the youngest attorneys appointed to that position. In 1976, he received that department's Meritorious Service Award for his contributions to conservation and environmental law.

A native of Adams County, Colorado, Lambertson now lives in Silver Spring, Maryland, with his wife Bonnie and their two daughters.
