Notes from the Dean

I want to share with you the provocative and even frightening message of Professor Jonathon Landers' recent article entitled "The Decline of the American Law School" which appeared in the Fall 1980 issue of the Harvard Law School Bulletin.

Professor Landers declares that "In all the Hoopla about ever-rising salaries for beginning (and experienced) lawyers, there has been an unnoticed casualty — the future law teacher." While admitting that as yet there is little hard evidence to support his thesis, he nevertheless convincingly demonstrates that many law schools have already lowered their faculty hiring standards and that it is just a matter of time until most others do the same.

Landers observes that while more and more full-time faculty are turning to private practice, it is becoming commonplace for law schools to take years to fill faculty vacancies, and that the number of persons moving from United States Supreme Court and other prestige clerkships into law teaching is rapidly declining (as is the movement from the nation's leading law firms into law teaching). The basic problem, of course, is that unlike private law salaries, law teaching salaries have not kept pace with inflation, so that beginning law teachers not only have to forego the prospects of substantially higher future earnings (as they always have), they now must also face immediate and drastic salary cuts.

Landers also points out that there has been a "general lowering of the intellectual endeavors of law professors" as more and more faculty find it necessary to shift their energies to part-time practice, or other more lucrative law-related activities, such as preparing outlines, nutshells, and study aids, with the result that there has been a decline in the publication of first-rate scholarly law review articles and treatises.

Landers goes on to observe (correctly, in my opinion) that in this period of inflation and declining enrollments, universities simply do not have the resources needed to provide increased financial support for law schools. Law faculties generally are already paid more than most of their counterparts in other disciplines, and university administrators are clearly between a rock and a hard place when requested to further widen this differential.

Landers concludes, also correctly in my opinion, that

The only realistic available source of such funding is the bar, and especially those private firms and corporations who employ large numbers of new lawyers. Such firms and corporations have the largest stake in the continued excellence of legal education, and the resources with which to make a dramatic impact on legal education.

He ends on a rather chilling note:

And what if it does not come? Then, I suspect, we are going to see a slow but steady decline in the American law school as we have known it. Most likely, the institution of the year 2,000 will be one in which the full-time professor is the exception, and the larger number of teachers are essentially practicing lawyers . . . Also, those who employ lawyers may find it necessary to provide an in-house kind of educational experience similar to that now provided by the law schools.

We are thus, in a sense, at a crossroads. Which way we go will depend on decisions made by numerous lawyers and bar groups over the next few years. As noted, however, the effects of the persistent salary problem are already being felt, and given the time it takes to build a quality law faculty, the time for doing something constructive may be getting short. It would be a shame to see the American law school lose by default.

Search Committee Formed and in Operation for Law School Dean

As a result of Dean Thomas G. Brown's decision to return to the practice of law at the end of this academic year, a Law Dean Search Committee was formed in the fall of this year. The members of the search committee include Dean Brown; Assistant Dean Ruth Casarez; Judge Luis Rovira; Professor Richard Jessor, Director of the Institute of Behavioral Science; Professor Stanley Cristol, Acting Dean of the Graduate School; and Professors Clifford Calhoun, Norton Steuben and Stephen Williams of the Law School Faculty. Professor Steuben is chairman of the committee. Ms. Sherri Robertson, Director of Affirmative Action for the Boulder Campus, meets with and advises the committee with respect to affirmative action guidelines.

After a number of meetings in the early fall, at which the committee determined its procedures and developed a list of "Identifiers" to use in the screening of candidates for the position of Dean, it conducted an aggressive nationwide recruitment campaign during the remainder of the fall and early winter with the help of members of the Law School Faculty and others. As a result of this campaign, more than 80 applications have been received for the position of Dean of the Law School to date. The committee is presently engaged in the very difficult task of selecting approximately six to ten individuals who will be invited to interview on the Boulder Campus from the numerous, well-qualified applicants. It is anticipated that these interviews will occur during the latter part of the month of February and the first two to three weeks of March. After the interviews have taken place, the new Dean will be selected. The committee anticipates the selection of the new Dean will occur by the end of March or the first or second week in April. While the quality of the applicants for the position of Dean has made the screening process very difficult, the committee members are very hopeful and encouraged by the quality of individuals aspiring to the deanship of the University of Colorado School of Law.

Coen Lecture Slated For April 13

The Honorable A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr., United States Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit, will deliver this year's Coen lecture. Judge Higginbotham's lecture, "Race and the American Legal Process," will be held in the Lindsley Memorial Courtroom on Monday, April 13, at 8 p.m. There will be a reception immediately following.

A native of Trenton, New Jersey, Judge Higginbotham graduated from Yale Law

School in 1952. From 1954-1962 he was a member of Norris, Gun, Harris and Higginbotham in Philadelphia. During this same period, he undertook several special assignments for the state and federal governments. In 1962, President Kennedy nominated him for a seven-year term as Commissioner for the Federal Trade Commission. His appointment made him the first black to be a member at the commission level of any Federal Regulatory Agency and the youngest person to be named a commissioner for the F.T.C.

From 1964-1977, he distinguished himself as a federal district judge for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. He was then nominated to serve on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals; during the nomination process, he received the ABA's highest rating, "exceptionally well qualified" by unanimous vote. President Carter made the appointment in October, 1977.

In addition to his countless professional accomplishments, Judge Higginbotham has also authored In the Matter of Color, Vol. 1, a well-documented account of how the American legal system has promoted racism throughout the years.

Development Drive Launched

The Law School's development program has had a most successful and energetic beginning. The Annual Funds Appeal for 1980-81 was formally kicked off in late November with a three night student-faculty phonathon. Phonathon volunteers called many of our alumni and invited them to join the Dean's Club through an annual gift of at least one hundred dollars. Current members of the Dean's Club were asked to voluntarily increase their gift to $250, since inflation has devalued their original pledge. The phonathon effort netted pledges of over $20,000. Over 50 new members joined the Dean's Club, and new members are still enrolling. A cocktail party was held on January 28 to celebrate the phonathon's success and to thank the volunteers and support staff of both the Dean's Office and the Development Office. Faculty members, administrators, Dean's Club members and student volunteers were invited to attend.

In addition to the phonathon, by the end of 1980, all law alumni were solicited for the Annual Fund either directly through the Dean's Office or through the Class Chairmen Program. The Annual Fund is the mainstay of a fine law school, providing the unrestricted money which is essential to the maintenance and growth of all areas of the law school.

During 1981, several other projects with specific objectives will be undertaken. In efforts to minimize the effects of legislative cuts and inflation, support must be sought from the private sector. To cultivate this support, it is necessary to have an ongoing development program. Thus, a "Seed Money" campaign has been launched. The goal of this campaign is to raise $50,000 to provide for the initial cost of implementing the development program. The Law School's Development Seed Money Campaign has been progressing under the guidance of G. Lane "Ernie" Earnest of Caplan and Earnest in Boulder; Ernie's regional chairmen for this primarily Colorado based project are Neil King, Boulder; Byron Akers, Colorado Springs; Steve Kinney, Denver; Garth Rodgers, Fort Collins; Greg Hoskin, Grand Junction; Walker Miller, Greeley; Don Alspaugh, Longmont; Richard Ball, Loveland; and Al Jensen, Pueblo. In addition, Hal Feder and Tim Campbell are serving as Seed Money leaders for the Class of 1959. Boyd Ecker is regional chairman for the Washington, D.C. area. Forde Athern of San Francisco has volunteered to raise "Seed Money" in northern California. This campaign will continue through 1981. As always, it is necessary to seek and obtain the support of our alumni first, before we approach friends in the corporate and foundation community. Alumni can join in our development efforts, not only by sending their gifts, but also by volunteering their time, energy and know-how to specific projects. Alumni help is vital.

So far, alumni response has been enthusiastic and generous. Sincere appreciation is extended to the following donors who have made gifts of $1000 or more since October of 1979:

Amax Foundation of New York: gift will be used in the Law School's Natural Resources Program. Mr. Stanley Dempsey, Vice Pres. of Amax, Inc., facilitated this gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert and Christine Bearman of Boulder: gift will be used for the Faculty Development Fund.

Mr. Paul C. Benedetti of Boulder: gift will be added to the Law School's Development Seed Money Fund and for unrestricted funds.

Mr. Frank Buchanan of Boulder: gift will be used for the Law Library.

Mr. Nicholas Doman of New York: gift will be used for the Law Deans Club.

The Empire Savings, Building and Loan Association: gift was used to sponsor the C.U. law alumni cocktail party and faculty participation at the Colorado Bar Association meeting in October, 1980. Mr. James E. Carpenter, President of Empire Savings, facilitated this gift.

Gorsuch, Kirgis, Campbell, Walker & Grover, Denver Law firm: gift will be used for Diversity Student Program Scholarships.

Mr. Donald C. Hays of New York: gift will be added to the Law Library Endowment Fund.

Holland and Hart, Denver Law firm: gift will be used for Diversity Student Program Scholarships.

Hutchinson, Black, Hill, Buchanan, & Cook, Boulder Law firm: gift will be used for the Law School Development Seed Money Fund.

Mrs. Henry S. Lindsley of Denver: gift will be used to repair the sound system and to replace furniture in the Lindsley Memorial Courtroom.

Mr. Harold Taft King of Denver: gift will be used for the Law Library and the Dean's Club.

Mr. J. H. Kingdom of Boulder: gift will be added to the Frederick A. Storke Scholarship Fund.

Mr. Chuck Mau of Honolulu: gift will be added to the Mau Scholarship Fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Moses of Boulder: gift will be added to the Law School's Development Seed Money Fund.

Moses, Wittemyer, Harrison & Woodruff, P.C., Boulder Law firm: gift will be added to the Law School's Development Seed Money Fund.

Overbrook Foundation of New York: gift will be added to the Law Library Endowment Fund. Mr. Bethuel Webster of New York facilitated this gift.

Mrs. Annie T. Paddock of Boulder: gift will be used for the Law Library.

Mr. Bruce Paul and Dr. Irvin Vinnick of Denver: gift will be added to the Law School's Development Seed Money Fund.

Mr. Ira Rothgerber of Boulder: gift will be added to the Law Library Endowment Fund.

Mr. Richard Schrepferman of Denver: gift will be used for Diversity Student Program Scholarships.

Sherman & Howard, Denver Law firm: gift will be used for Diversity Student Program Scholarships.

Mr. George C. Williams of Boulder: gift will be added to the Law School's Development Seed Money Fund.

Professor and Mrs. Stephen Williams of Boulder: gift is in memory of their son, Christopher, and will be used for the Law Library.

Zarlengo, Mott & Zarlengo, Denver Law firm: gift will be used for general scholarship funds.

Employment Category	CU 1979 Graduates	NALP 1979 Graduates
Private Practice	45%	54 %
Legal Services/ Public Interest	11%	5.4%
Business (legal and non-legal)	8%	10.5%
Government (federal, state, and local)	13%	14.7%
Judicial Clerkships	15%	9.8%
Military JAGCs	3%	1.7%
Academic Areas	4%	3.0%
Other	1%	0.7%

Not included in these statistics are graduates who were not seeking employment, had not taken or passed a bar examination, or who did not report their employment status by the time the figures were compiled, eight months following the May, 1979, commencement. When compared with similar employment information about the past few classes, the 1979 survey indicates no major changes in availability of jobs in traditional areas for either CU or NALP graduates.

The Placement Office is presently collecting information for the next employment survey. Class of 1980 graduates who have not reported their employment status are encouraged to contact Milly Danielson, the Placement Director, at 492-8651.

Placement

Survey findings for CU law graduates of the Class of '79 did not deviate from those of former classes: most located their first jobs in traditional areas of legal practice. The following statistics compare the percentages of 1979 CU graduates working in various sectors with the percentages compiled for the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) 1979 Employment Survey from information supplied by 139 (82%) of the ABA-approved law schools.

Note On Your Calendar

The Placement Committee headed by Professor Sears is planning a day-long Placement Conference on April 3, 1981. Alumni will have the opportunity to visit classes, tour the library, have lunch with our students and faculty, and exchange ideas about placement. Those interested in hiring an associate may also arrange for student interviews.

While the day will have some serious overtones, it will be a good occasion to renew ties with our Law School. Later in the day (around 3:00 or thereabouts), the students will host a beer party and volleyball game (weather permitting) on the patio of the Law School. All are invited to attend.

Dean's Club Increase

Due in large part to the tireless efforts of Dean Brown and our new Director of Development, Barbara Allar, the list of Dean's Club Members continues to grow. This growth is extremely important as the Law School experiences severe cutbacks in every area of operation. Alumni contributions are used to supplement numerous tight budgets in efforts to maintain a high quality law school.

Although the list may be incomplete as new members join every day, we wish to thank the Dean's Club members listed on page 6 for their generous support.

Water Law Program Scheduled

The School of Law will conduct a course entitled "Water Law: Issues for the Eighties" on June 8-11, 1981. The four day course is open to attorneys either practicing or interested in the area of water rights. Tuition will be $475.00. Faculty will include leading scholars and practitioners from throughout the country. It is expected that the course will be accredited for 24-28 hours of Continuing Legal Education credit. For more information contact Professor David H. Getches, (303) 492-7377.

Alumni Notes

Allen T. Compton ('63) was appointed to the Alaska Supreme Court in December 1980. Originally from Kansas City, MO, Compton migrated to Alaska in 1971. Upon arrival, he took a position with Alaska Legal Services in Juneau; two years later, he turned to private practice. In 1976 he was appointed to the Superior Court Bench. Compton is known as "an excellent jurist and a fine judge."

Moses Lasky ('28) was recently at the Law School from February 9-13 serving as its first "Practitioner-in-Residence." Lasky, a giant in the field of complex litigation, participated in numerous law school activities. He attended classes, led discussions on pertinent topics, oftentimes focusing on cases he has handled throughout his career. He also met formally and informally with University administrators, faculty, students and alumni.

Lasky, who represents Al Davis in the Oakland Raiders litigation, also presented an update on the progress of the case. The "Practitioner-in-Residence Program" got an excellent start with this most distinguished practitioner.

Chuck Mau ('33) recently visited the campus to attend a meeting of the Board of Directors of the CU Foundation. Mau, who attended CU undergraduate as well as CU Law School, is active in fundraising activities for the University. Eight years ago, he established the Mau Scholarship Fund, available to law students who are Colorado residents.

Richard C. McLean ('58) was appointed to the Boulder District Court on September 25, 1980. McLean, 48, has practiced law in Colorado since graduation from law school. Active in civic affairs, McLean served on the Boulder City Council from 1970-73; he was also mayor of Boulder from 1972 to 1973.

J. David Penwell ('62) delivered a lecture at the Second Annual Convention of the Australasia Resort Timesharing Council in Sydney, Australia on February 23, 1981. He spoke on "When Resort Timesharing is a Security."

In Memoriam

Richard L. Painter ('68) was killed in an avalanche on St. Mary's Glacier on November 27, 1980. Painter, 42, was an attorney for Chevron U.S.A. in Denver. He is survived by his family which includes his brother, Charles Painter, who is also a CU Law School graduate and practices in Colorado Springs.

Faculty Profile

Emily M. Calhoun is the latest member of the faculty to receive tenure. The Tenure Award, made in October, 1980 with the enthusiastic support of the law faculty, is particularly significant as she became the only tenured woman on the law school faculty.

Professor Calhoun came to the Law School as a visiting professor during academic year 1978-79 from the University of Georgia Law School. The following year she was appointed to the permanent faculty as an associate professor. Currently, Professor Calhoun teaches Torts, Federal Courts and a seminar in Products Liability. In addition to her teaching, she is also in the process of preparing a textbook on Federal Jurisdiction.

A native of Texas, Professor Calhoun obtained her law degree from the University of Texas School of Law in 1971. She then became staff counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation, Southern Regional Office, in Atlanta. During that period, she engaged in considerable litigation in the area of prisoner's rights and racial discrimination.

Although Professor Calhoun continues to devote some time to pro bono work, her main goal at the present is to concentrate on excellence in teaching and completion of her textbook. Other courses that she teaches occasionally include Evidence, Law and Medicine and seminars on prisoner's rights litigation and women and the law.

Faculty Notes

Marianne Wesson is on leave during the 1980-81 academic year. Participating in an experimental exchange program, Professor Wesson is serving this year as an Assistant U.S. Attorney with the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Colorado. She is engaged exclusively in criminal litigation.

Professors Homer Clark and Robert Nagel presented a colloquium on the role of the United States Supreme Court in deciding cases that concern the family on February 12. The colloquium was one of the events sponsored during the Law School's first "Practitioner-in-Residence Program," held from February 9-13. The timeliness of the colloquium presentation led to wide participation.

Professors William Pizzi and Arthur Travers will have articles in the Annual Survey of Colorado Law. Professor Pizzi will discuss developments in criminal law, while Professor Travers will cover changes in the area of commercial transactions.

Professor David Getches is serving on the editorial board that is updating Felix S. Cohen's Handbook of Federal Indian Law. The forty-year old treatise is considered the prime authority in the field. Publication of the revision is expected in May, 1981.

Spring Main Event

Spring signals the return of many pleasant activities: picnics, softball, sunshine, income tax returns, etc. At the Law School, spring heralds two events of significance — final exams and Sports Day. To the student body, Sports Day is a chance to meet and compete with fellow students and faculty in areas other than torts, property, or U.C.C. The therapeutic value is considerable (plus the fact that all the "library rats" are flushed out of Fleming for the day).

In addition to the immediate psychological benefits it imparts to students and faculty, Sports Day has become a vehicle for the student body to involve alumni in the Law School experience again. Alumni participation in Sports Day events is the focus of our program this year.

Sports Day will be held on Saturday, April 11; in case of rain, it will be on April 18. Three events geared for individual, family and team participation will take place before lunch: first, a cross-country race around Boulder will be staged at an intermediate distance of three to five miles. Prizes will be in various categories. Second, a golf tournament is scheduled at the Flatirons Golf Course. Prizes will be awarded on a handicap basis. (greens fees to be paid by participants at the rate determined by the golf course). Finally, immediately before lunch, a volleyball tournament will be held in the area around Fleming. This is the major event of Sports Day and gives everyone a chance to reestablish old friendships and rivalries by organizing volleyball teams composed of alumni and their families.

Alumni and faculty members are encouraged to participate in this team competition. Six persons are required for entry as a team, but if an individual or group of less than six expressed an interest in competing, the Sports Day Committee will contact all interested participants in order to create complete teams. An entry fee of four dollars per team will be due on the day of the event.

A free lunch for all participants and their families will be provided at Fleming after the volleyball tournament. Beer and soft drinks will also be available. Several novelty events and a tug-of-war will be featured after lunch.

A big turnout is expected for the 1981 edition of Sports Day, but its success will depend upon alumni participation. Below is an entry form on which you indicate your interest in attending Sports Day. By specifying the events in which you are interested, Sports Day planners will be able to determine how best to accommodate the participants for each event. All who indicate an interest in participation will be contacted prior to the event.

Even if you do not wish to participate in any of the athletic activities, you are invited to bring your family and come for lunch. A good time is guaranteed for everyone.

Program Features Legal Services for the Aging

The Institute of Law and Aging (I.L.A.), started in Spring 1981, is the latest addition to the Law School's Legal Aid and Defender Program. Made possible through a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, the I.L.A. will provide legal services to eligible senior citizens, 55 years of age or older, in Boulder county. The program is unique in its approach to delivery of services: senior citizen clients will be served by senior citizen paralegals working in conjunction with law students. Five senior citizens have been selected to do client interviews and to act as spokespersons from specifically assigned areas of the country. Ten law students will participate in the program as well.

Michael Hockersmith, formerly Director of the University of Colorado Student Union Legal Services Program, will direct the I.L.A. He will also supervise the law students and paralegals.

Hockersmith received his J.D. in 1974 from the University of Texas at Austin School of Law. He was a VISTA attorney for a year. For the next three years he served as a staff attorney for Pikes Peak Legal Services in Colorado Springs where he performed a variety of duties involving civil litigation and law office management.

Mike looks forward to his new role with the I.L.A. since it will make use of his experience in such areas as administrative and mental health law. Also since this program is a prototype in Colorado, it will be watched closely and hopefully serve as a model for future programs.

The five paralegals in the program are from varied backgrounds: Kay LaSalle, a nurse; Tom Smith, retired from Mountain Bell; Adam Riistad and Gil Walker, both retired educators; and Verna Golz, an active member in many county programs, including the Older Women's League. The paralegals recently underwent a short but intensive training period. Intake for the I.L.A. program will be done on an outreach basis in eight different places: Boulder, Lafayette, Louisville, Nederland, Broomfield, Lyons, Allenspark and Longmont. Because I.L.A. representatives will travel to these various locations in Boulder county, the program will fill the gap for senior citizens who need legal aid, but are unable to get to Boulder for services.

The grant from the Department of Education was the culmination of two years of hard work by Legal Aid Director Roxanne Bailin and several I.L.A. board members.
