Water in the American West: Essays in Honor of Raphael J. Moses

Getches, David H., ed. Water in the American West: Essays in Honor of Raphael J. Moses. Boulder: Natural Resources Law Center, 1988.

Friends, colleagues, and admirers of Ray Moses have joined to share their perceptions on how western water law has been shaped and how it will progress in light of emerging conditions. The authors contributing essays represent, though not completely, the wide variety of Moses' interests and experiences in water law – history, international issues, economics, common property rights, groundwater, federal claims, water quality, and policy directions. John Sayre, Charles Wilkinson, Gilbert White, Joseph Friedkin, Charles Howe, Dan Tarlock, Clyde Martz, John Carlson, Paula Phillips, Ralph Johnson, and David Getches were asked to express their thoughts in a way that might be helpful in developing future water decisions and policies.
