AGENDA: Celebrating the Centennial of the Antiquities Act

University of Colorado Boulder. Natural Resources Law Center

University of Colorado Boulder. Center of the American West

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholar.law.colorado.edu/celebrating-centennial-of-antiquities-act

Part of the Administrative Law Commons, Courts Commons, Historic Preservation and Conservation Commons, Indian and Aboriginal Law Commons, Land Use Planning Commons, Law and Society Commons, Legislation Commons, Natural Resources and Conservation Commons, Natural Resources Law Commons, Natural Resources Management and Policy Commons, Place and Environment Commons, President/Executive Department Commons, Public Policy Commons, and the Recreation, Parks and Tourism Administration Commons

Citation Information
University of Colorado Boulder. Natural Resources Law Center and University of Colorado Boulder. Center of the American West, "AGENDA: Celebrating the Centennial of the Antiquities Act" (2006). Celebrating the Centennial of the Antiquities Act (October 9). http://scholar.law.colorado.edu/celebrating-centennial-of-antiquities-act/1

Reproduced with permission of the Getches-Wilkinson Center for Natural Resources, Energy, and the Environment (formerly the Natural Resources Law Center) at the University of Colorado Law School.
Celebrating the Centennial of the Antiquities Act
Keynote Address: Honorable Bruce Babbitt, Former Secretary of the Interior

October 9, 2006 University of Colorado School of Law, Wolf Law Building

For 100 years, the Antiquities Act has been used by nearly every President in the 20th century to set aside and protect lands threatened with privatization and development. The list of lands first protected under the Antiquities Act – and that might never have been protected without it – is truly remarkable. Many of our most treasured national parks including the Grand Canyon, Olympic, Zion, Arches, Glacier Bay, and Acadia, began as national monuments. All told, Presidents have issued 123 proclamations setting aside millions of acres of land under the Antiquities Act. The Natural Resources Law Center and the Center of the American West are honored to celebrate the centennial of 100th anniversary with former Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and a host of other distinguished speakers. We hope you can join us.